Tuesday 25th of May 2010, from 15-17h

Workshop Management Approaches at Earthen Heritage Sites - Culture and Development

When: Tuesday 25th of May 2010, from 15-17h

Where: Events Room, National Museum of Ethnology (Steenstraat 1 Leiden)

This workshop discusses the theory and daily practices of heritage management projects that deal with earthen archaeology and architecture in contexts of poverty and post-conflict. The workshop will discuss and compare the vision, objectives, results and challenges of three such projects, focusing in particular on the balance between community development and heritage conservation. The projects under discussion are The Bagh-e Jehan Nama Palace complex in Afghanistan (presented by Hanna Leijen, Centre for International Heritage Activities), The Ancient Merv Project in Turkmenistan (presented by Tim Williams, University College London), and The Djenné restoration project in Mali (presented by Annette Schmidt, National Museum of Ethnology). The workshop will be moderated by Sjoerd van der Linde, Faculty of Archaeology (Leiden University).

The workshop is open to all public: if you wish to attend, please contact Fleur Cools at info@heritage-activities.nl

The workshop Management Approaches at Earthen Heritage Sites is jointly organised by the Faculty of Archaeology at Leiden University, the Centre for International Heritage Activities (CIE) and the National Museum of Ethnology (Museum Volkenkunde).
